Air District issues another Spare the Air Smog Alert

Residents urged to find alternatives to driving alone

SAN FRANCISCO – Today, the Bay Area Air Quality Management District is issuing its eighth Spare the Air Alert for smog in 2017.

Air quality is forecast to be unhealthy again tomorrow, Sunday, August 27. A high-pressure system over the region, combined with triple-digit temperatures, light winds and smoke from the Oregon wildfires is expected to cause unhealthy ozone levels in the South and East Bay regions. There is no free transit tomorrow and there is no wood burning ban in place.

“Hot temperatures and tailpipe exhaust from Bay Area traffic is expected to cause unhealthy air quality this weekend,” said Jack Broadbent, executive officer of the Air District. “The most effective way to reduce smog is by leaving our cars at home and using transit or carpooling to weekend activities instead.”

Spare the Air Alerts are called when ozone pollution is forecast to reach unhealthy levels. Ozone, or smog, can cause throat irritation, congestion, chest pain, trigger asthma, inflame the lining of the lungs and worsen bronchitis and emphysema. Long-term exposure to ozone can reduce lung function. Ozone pollution is particularly harmful for young children, seniors and those with respiratory and heart conditions.

When a Spare the Air Alert is called, outdoor exercise should be done only in the early morning hours when ozone concentrations are lower. Residents are encouraged to reduce air pollution every day by rethinking their commute and avoiding driving alone.
