Air District issues third consecutive Spare the Air Smog Alert

Commuters urged to find alternatives to driving alone

SAN FRANCISCO – Today, the Bay Area Air Quality Management District is issuing its ninth Spare the Air Alert for smog in 2017.

Air quality is forecast to be unhealthy again tomorrow, Monday, August 28. A high-pressure system will remain over the region, leading to hot temperatures and light winds causing unhealthy ozone levels in the East Bay region. There is no free transit tomorrow and there is no wood burning ban in place.

“Unhealthy air quality for a third consecutive day underscores the need for reducing traffic on Bay Area roads,” said Jack Broadbent, executive officer of the Air District. “To reduce harmful air pollution and traffic congestion, we’re asking Bay Area residents to change to a more sustainable commute like carpooling, transit or teleworking.”

Spare the Air Alerts are called when ozone pollution is forecast to reach unhealthy levels. Ozone, or smog, can cause throat irritation, congestion, chest pain, trigger asthma, inflame the lining of the lungs and worsen bronchitis and emphysema. Long-term exposure to ozone can reduce lung function. Ozone pollution is particularly harmful for young children, seniors and those with respiratory and heart conditions.

When a Spare the Air Alert is called, outdoor exercise should be done only in the early morning hours when ozone concentrations are lower. Residents are encouraged to reduce air pollution every day by rethinking their commute and avoiding driving alone.
